

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a stanchion for a tarpaulin structure, which can be locked onto a fixing member (10). The invention provides a stanchion that can be reliably locked and has an improved service life, achieved by the provision of a counter bearing (28) and a support element (29), the latter being inserted between the fixing member (10) and the counter bearing (28).